

TAFT MOVING EASTWARD

He Stops at Birthplace of Dickinson

PEOPLE GREET PRESIDENT

With Usual Enthusiasm—Delivers Tribute to His War Secretary—After a Brief Address He Leaves for Birmingham.

Columbus, Miss., Nov. 3.—President Taft received a joyous welcome here yesterday when he came to visit the birthplace of Secretary of War Dickinson and brought the secretary with him. Mr. Taft held a reception at the old home of General Stephen D. Lee of the Confederate forces, as the guest of the son of the house, Blount H. Lee. Later he made an address from a stand erected on Main street, and before leaving at 2:30 p. m. for Birmingham, Ala., attended his first harbores of the trip at the Mississippi Industrial Girls' school.

The president took occasion here to pay high tribute to Secretary Dickinson. In fact ever since he has entered Mississippi Mr. Taft has lost no opportunity to give evidence of his high regard for the secretary of war.

In the course of his midnight speech at Jackson last night the president said of Secretary Dickinson: "Now, I have got 'Mac' Dickinson in the cabinet. He did not come because he wanted to. He came because he knew why I wanted him. I wanted him because I wanted to give an earnest example to the South of the truth of my declaration that I was anxious to bring you closer to the government at Washington and I also took him because I wanted one of the ablest men of the country who does things, and I wanted that Panama Canal built. I know if he took hold of it, it would go. One of your great heroes of Mississippi is Jefferson Davis, and I am glad that the administration at Washington has wiped out the evidence of that extreme partisan bitterness of Cabin John Bridge and that his name is restored there as secretary of war. I am glad because I know and can testify from my experience in the South that the same joy that they experience at that act on the part of the administration is the joy of a common country and loyalty to a common flag."

En route to Columbus yesterday the president made brief car-and speeches at Kosciusko, Ackerman, Starkville and West Point. At each place he was greeted by an enthusiastic throng, the negroes being drawn up on one side of the track and the whites on the other.

CANNON MAY ASK INVESTIGATION.

The Speaker is Disturbed By The Charges By Herbert Parsons.

Daaville, Ill., Nov. 3.—One of Speaker Cannon's close friends says that the speaker will demand an investigation by Congress of the charge made by Congressman Parsons of New York that he entered into a deal with Tammany to block certain legislation at Albany in return for its help to perpetrate the existing House rule.

If Speaker Cannon demands an investigation of Parsons' charge he will follow several illustrious precedents. After the Adams campaign Speaker Henry Clay was accused by Representative Krenner of Pennsylvania of having dickered with John Quincy Adams for the office of secretary of state. Krenner charged that Clay supported Adams on the pledge. Mr. Clay called a member to the chair and made a speech advocating a committee to investigate the story. The committee was appointed, but it never reported.

On Feb. 27, 1879, Speaker Samuel J. Randall called John G. Carlisle to the chair while he offered a resolution for a committee to investigate his own connection with a government contract. A committee of five exonerated the speaker.

On Dec. 2, 1872, Speaker Blaine asked the House to investigate bribery rumors in connection with the Credit Mobilier and the Union Pacific railroad. A com-

HELPING PURE FOOD LAW.

An Important Action By Treasury Department.

Washington, Nov. 3.—For some time the Treasury Department has expedited the operation of the pure food law by permitting a direct report to collectors of customs at ports where government laboratories are established of violations in cases where precedents have been established. A decision issued yesterday adds to the list of precedents adulterated or decomposed foods, notably wormy fine products containing sulphur dioxide without proper label and alleged cognac bearing the label, "Marque Depose-A Cognac." The government holds that true cognac can be imported only from the Cognac district, and that all labeling as cognac of brandies produced elsewhere is a violation of the pure food law.

NOT MONEY ENOUGH.

Manager Lake of Boston Red Sox Therefore Resigned.

Boston, Nov. 3.—The announcement was made last night that Fred Lake had resigned his position as manager of the Boston American league baseball team and that President John I. Taylor of the club, is seeking a new manager. At a conference yesterday Manager Lake and President Taylor failed to agree on Lake's salary for next season with the result that the resignation followed. No indication was given of last night.

Fred Lake took charge of the Boston American team in the middle of the season of 1928, succeeding James McGuire. An improvement in the work of the players under him was noticed at once and he signed for another season. His work with the team of young players this year was a feature of the American league race.

Lake was formerly catcher for the Boston National league team and later was manager of the Lowell club of the New England league.

President Taylor stated that he considered that Manager Lake had made a success of his position, but that the sum the manager named for another season's work was too high. Mr. Lake had said that $8,500 was the least he would take.

In commenting upon his differences with President Taylor, Mr. Lake said: "I believe that my success warranted my desire for a salary. Under my management the club finished in third place this season, and besides was a great financial success, an improvement over seventh place the year before."

Mr. Lake will seek a position as manager of some other team either in the major or minor leagues. One of the most likely candidates mentioned as his successor is Patsy Donovan, former manager of St. Louis and Brooklyn, and this year connected with the Boston American team in the capacity of a scout.

ARMY-NAVY GAME OFF.

There Will Be No Football Contest This Year.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The great annual football contest between the West Point cadets and Annapolis midshipmen, which was to take place at Philadelphia, Nov. 27, will not be played this year, final decision having been reached yesterday by the athletic authorities of the naval academy to grant the request of the superintendent of the military academy to cancel the game owing to the death of Cadet Eugene A. Byrne, as a result of injuries received Saturday in the game with Harvard.

This decision which was made known at the navy department yesterday, had been postponed in the hope that some way might be found to play the game, which is looked forward to by the entire service both army and navy.

COMPLAINS OF FERRER

Demonstrations Abroad—French Comments Hurt His Feelings—Spain So "Constitutional" King Cannot Pardon.

Paris, Nov. 3.—A special despatch from Madrid to the Journal gives an interview with King Alfonso, who expressed himself bitterly on the Ferrer demonstrations abroad. He said he understood the attitude of the masses, who were always ready to take sides with what they considered right, but he continued, "That intellectual savants, who do not dare to announce a discovery before it is verified a hundred times by experiments, should protest without inquiry against a judgment conformable with laws they are ignorant of and against the guaranteed honor of Spanish soldiers, I cannot understand. To listen to certain Frenchmen one would think we were savages and live in a time of the Inquisition, instead of a constitutional monarchy, so constitutional indeed that I have not even the initiative of the right of pardon."

H., Nov. 3.—The supreme court yesterday overruled the demurrer of the Boston & Maine railroad in the case transferred from the Rockingham county docket in which the state, through Attorney General Eastman, asks for an injunction to restrain the railroad from demanding or receiving rates for the transportation of freight in excess of the maximum rates established by law. ## IN BOSTON MARKETS.

Eggs Have Made a Further Advance in Price.

Boston, Nov. 3.—Eggs have made a further advance in the local market under decreasing receipts and an active demand. Dealers find it hard to get enough fine fresh stock to supply the demand, though good storage stock is offered freely and at moderate prices. Apparently, retailers are in no hurry to take on held goods, while the bulk of any sort can be had. Little change is noted in butter or cheese beyond a gradually hardening tendency due to the fact that the creameries and cheese factories are getting near the end of their seasons and production is dropping off.

CHANGING THE FEED OF COWS.

Should Be No Poor Milking Times in Winter.

There is a transition period each year that is trying to the milking cows. It begins when the frost has killed the pasture grass and ends when there is no longer any hint of summer in the air. If the cows can be aided over this period they are safe for a good milk flow during the winter. If they fall off now it will be almost impossible to bring them back to normal later on, says the Indiana Farmer. As a result, the milk checks will dwindle just at a time when they ought to swell. Therefore, the farmer should be put forth to keep the milk flow up. There are two ways in which this can be done, namely keep winter milkers or feed silage. If one can do both, so much the better.

Cows that freshen in the fall, say in October or November are ready to begin the winter in a robust condition. Their milking powers are not on the wane, as is the case with spring milkers. They are ready to meet the natural setbacks of cold weather and dry feed with a good, strong constitution and a full flow of milk. In the spring the change from hay to grass comes just as they are beginning to fall off in their milk flow and the green feed keeps them up to top notch production. Later, when the growth and rise begin to both, one is losing on an old milkier, not a fresh cow. The loss is naturally less. And finally, when the pasture grass falls entirely, the cow is a dry one instead of one that is giving a quart or two of milk. By the time the freshers again have you finished the milk work of the season and are ready to fatten and putter over Brindle. If the cows are given plenty of attention good returns will be secured. But suppose winter milkers are out of the question. The next best proposition is the silo.

The old theory that milk from cows fed silage is inferior milk is exploded. The contrary has been proved by systematic experiments. The objections to the silo are scarce, for it has been found to fill many a want in the dairy world. But one must not think that silage is a pure winter feed. It should be used whenever needed: fall, winter, spring and summer, especially in the fall. The saving in milk will be great if there is silage to tide over the dry pasture period. When the pasture grass is killed by frost the fresh silage will take its place and avoid any falling off in the milk flow. It enables us to reproduce very largely summer conditions in the winter months.

This is the logical method of securing the best milk flow, furnish good pasture supplemented by silage crops and silage and followed by silage and concentrates. But suppose that the silo is impossible. The only course left to the man who wishes to make a success of the dairy business is to depend upon silage crops. Begin with good pasture, follow this by corn, sorghum, millet, or eye out and feed green. Use then green stuff until it is gone, and then begin on good, bright clover hay. From the start these feeds may be accompanied by concentrates to good advantage: also bran, oats and corn ground together, or corn and cob meal.

LAST RITES FOR WEST POINTER

Cadet Eugene Byrne Buried With Military Honors—His Comrades Mourned About His Grave.

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The body of Cadet Eugene Byrne was buried yesterday in the West Point cemetery.

It was a military funeral and took place not far from the spot where, on Saturday last, the young first class man at the United States Military academy fell with fatal injuries toward the end of the football contest between West Point and Harvard.

Massed about the grave were his comrades, the officers of the academy and the army post and scores of friends. Close by the coffin, as it was lowered into the earth, stood the parents of the dead youth.

As the last words were spoken three volleys from the rifles of the firing platoon resounded from the hills of the Highlands and the ceremony was ended.

In anticipation of the funeral, outsiders streamed into the reservation from an early hour, each arriving train bringing its quota of mourners to participate in the ceremonial. From yesterday, floral tributes in profusion had been coming in.

Many of these floral offerings were banked about the altar in the Catholic chapel at the end of the academy reservation, where the body of Cadet Eugene Byrne had reposed in its flag-draped coffin since its removal from the post hospital yesterday morning.

As the time for the religious services in the chapel approached, the cadet battalion, to muffled drums, marched from their barracks to the chapel. Inside the chapel, the chaplain of the dead cadet took up their assigned places of honor, next to the parents of the youth, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Byrne of Buffalo, and the other members of the family.

Aside from a few of the members of delegations from Harvard university, from the Harvard club of New York and the members of the academic board and officers of the academy and army post, the administrative chapel would accommodate no more.

In the presence of this company the ritual of the Roman Catholic church was performed over the body of the young cadet, Right Rev. Monsignor C. G. O'Keefe in charge of the Catholic places of worship at the post and its vicinity, officiating.

Then came the march to the burial place. Facing the grave, the military escort formed, the others informally grouped around.

With the last rites of the church, the body was lowered into earth. Then came the last act of the impressive ceremonial. The company of mourners stepped back, the firing platoon fired a triple volley and the trumpets sounded "taps."

The post will be in mourning for 30 days, the cadet officers, by general order of Superintendent Scott, wearing mourning badges of crepe on the hilts of their swords.

LAKES-TO-GULF CONVENTION.

Closing Session at New Orleans Yesterday.

New Orleans, Nov. 3.—The closing session yesterday of the lakes-to-gulf waterways convention was marked by enthusiastic expressions of faith in an attainment of "14 feet through the valley."

Schenectady, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Two Boston & Maine engines were telecooped at the easterly end of the single track bridge over the Mohawk river near Rotterdam Junction early this morning. Wrong signals is given as the cause.

There is a double track leading to the bridge from both directions. The engineer of the east bound freight,
